

Presentation via Video and during the Conference

Part I: Presentation via video

The following information provides important guidelines on how to prepare a video presentation for your paper.

- You need to submit a video presentation no matter whether you choose to attend the conference in person at the Yueda Financial City International Hotel in Guangzhou or online via Zoom.
- You have a maximum of 30 minutes for your presentation. In the beginning of the video, please show your face and give a brief introduction of yourself.
- You should name your video as “A-B” where A is your paper ID and B contains the first 5 words of your paper title.
- Your paper ID can be found in the acceptance notification email we sent to you. If you cannot find it, please contact Dongcheng Li.
- The video can be in any of the following 4 formats: mp4, mov, wmv, and avi.
- You need to upload your QRS 2022 video presentation at the following site
<https://app.oatos.com/link?code=qmDSqJE> (password QRS2022)

The deadline is November 25.

- These videos will be made available for all the attendees before the conference so that they can watch the videos at their own convenience.

Part II: Presentation during the conference

- Videos submitted before the conference (see Part 1) will not be played during the conference.
- Authors of each paper must give a 5-minute short presentation to summarize their methodologies and findings followed by a Q/A.
- No matter whether you choose to attend the conference in-person or online, you will log in to a pre-scheduled live session via Zoom to give your presentation and answer questions.

Details of log in information for Zoom meetings will be posted soon.

- If you choose to attend the conference in-person, you can also meet face-to-face with other attendees who join the conference in-person.

Both Part I and Part II of the presentations must be done by one of the authors in order for the paper to be included in the IEEE digital library and indexed by the EI Compendex. This requirement cannot be satisfied by a guest presenter who is not a co-author of the paper; such papers will not be eligible for the digital library or the indexing service. Please send an email to Dongcheng Li with sufficient justification in the event of extraordinary circumstances that would make the above requirements impossible.
